put ashore at Yenisey harbors from Krasnoyarsk to Turukhansk. They were all from Moscow, and they were exiled because they had been accused of Zionism. They said that Jews from Moscow had been sent in other directions as well. They did not know the extent of this action.

- 5. In 1952 in Moscow and in other large cities the Jews were purged from the MVD apparatus. To Dudinka alone were sent ten MVD officers, the lowest rank of whom was captain. None of them had been convicted. They continued to wear the MVD uniform, but had to register at the MVD komendatura in the same manner as the other exiles.
- 6. In general, source believes it can be said that the Russian people do not like Jews, in spite of the fact that the Government has officially forbidden race discrimination. If Jews are present among a group of Russians, the Russians are very careful about what they say. They do not trust the Jews, and are afraid they will report on what they have heard. One often hears the following expressions used as abuse: "stingy as a Jew", or "cunning as a Jew".
